THE CHILD-HEART.

The Child-heart is so strange a little thing—

So mild so tenderly shy and small—When group-up hearts thro' it go snapping

Behind the wall, her darts pierce out at all—

It is the veriest mouse
That hides in any house—

So wild a little thing is any Child-heart!
Nay, little Child-heart, you have never need

To fear us—we are weaker far than you—

The who should be fearful—we indeed—

Should hide us, too, as darkly as you do—

Safe, as yourself, withdraw, Hearing the world roar on Too awful, awful, awful for the Child-heart!

Child-heart! mild heart—
He, my little wild heart!

Come up here to me out of the dark,
Or let me come to you!

—James Whitcomb Riley.

SOCIAL.

Mr. J. S. Amery, colonial editor of the London Times, who made many friends on his tour of the west two years ago, has just returned from a serious illness in London and has been ordered to South Africa to recuperate, consequently postponing for another year the Canadian trip contemplated.

The social event of yesterday was the largely attended and delightful tea giving by Mrs. Frank Oliver. The hostess received in the dining room, which was beautifully decorated with quantities of pink and white roses and carnations, seating a charming group of black lace over silk and chiffon with trimmings of cut jet and touches of pale blue on the garage. Miss Clara Oliver was in pale blue and trim with blue lace and insertion and Miss Anna Oliver wore white crepe de chine. Refreshments were served in the dining room on a big beautiful table artistically arranged with white chrysanthemums. Mrs.
Alan Aylesworth and Mrs. James Macdonald presided at the table, and Mrs.
J. G. Foster served third cups in the library. Among the many present were Mrs. Mackenzie-Williams, Lady Tachemson, Mrs. R. L. Borden, Mrs. Clifford Sutton, Mrs. Martin Griffin, Hon.
Mrs. Lauriat, Mrs. Fred Powell, Mrs.
Robert Hill, Ottawa Free Press.

A WOMAN WHO KNEW.

With Mrs. Craigie's sudden death last year passed one of the most brilliant of the younger school of English novelists—a woman whose death was unusually regretted both for the loss of her own charming personality and for the abrupt termination of a career that had not yet reached its highest development.

Operatic extracts, taken from the books of this versatile woman and arranged now in book form as "Life and Tomorrow," are far better worth the arrangement than most epigrams of modern writers. They not only speak with brilliance, but they have a crystal of wisdom at the heart of each.

It is to be recalled that the deep knowledge of life evidenced in her writings to this young woman was largely had from the tragedy of her life, bought at the great cost of her life-happiness. Unfortunately selecting and marrying in her early twenties a man who was in no degree her mate and whom with more mature judgment she would not have married, she spent a few unhappy years with him, then secured a legal separation, the custody of their child being given to the young woman.

Turned to Writing.
Then to fill her life as happier women's lives were filled with their home and social duties Mrs. Craigie turned with zest to writing. Her real literary talent developed rapidly and under the name of John Oliver Hobbie she produced several books and plays, widely read on the other side of the Atlantic and which brought in the young author an enormous income, much of which was lavished upon the education of her son.

Mrs. Hobbie was the granddaughter of the Hon. Peter Bannister who represented Edinburgh in the colonial parliament at Halifax for twenty-five years.
Some of the clever epigrams in this book of selected life are:
"Political regulations are made by saying what you think, and they are kept by saying what you don't think." "A man with a career can have no time to waste upon his wife or his friends—he has to devote himself wholly to his enemies."
"What a cruel world it would be if women loved men in as better way than men want love women."
"Never trust a man's opinion on any subject until he has been in love. Love is the only thing which can make life as clear as possible."
"The secret of managing a man is to let him have his own way in little things. He will change his plan of life when he won't change his shoemaker."
"Men will forgive any fault in a person so long as she can make a good pass pleasantly. They do not want wonderful characters—they want people who are civil at dinner."
"A true look and a true play can't be otherwise than moral. It is the false picture—no matter how pretty—which makes for immorality."
"A woman's instinct is rarely at fault it is only when she attempts to argue with it that she blunders."
There is an echo of her own married marriage in these:
"Those who have made unhappy marriages are still, while Mrs. Hobbie ones are on a level with the crowd. No one sees them!"
"Do not marry a woman whom you can not manage to love with, but the some without whom you cannot live
at all."

A Slight Mistake.

Young Hoppel-Humpty, have gooseberries got lost?

Young Hoppel-Humpty—Then I've swallowed a caterpillar.

Practical.

Father—"I wish you'd invite that young man to come up here tomorrow night." Daughter (sighing at the request)—"Why, father, I thought you said you had no use for him?" Father—"No! I did, last summer. But tomorrow I'm going to put up the store."

A SINGER TO SINGERS.

Mrs. Alhani has contributed to the Strand Magazine some tabloid advice to those who would sing. It is now thirty seven years since the French-Canadian soprano, then 20 years old, made her formal debut in opera, in Messina. The opera was "La Sonnambula." Many people are unaware of the fact that she was the first to sing the roles of Elzabeth, Kiss and Ren in the Italian version of Wagner's works. London opera-goers also remember her singing of Isolde at Covent Garden some ten or eleven years ago, with Jean de Reszke as Tristan.
There are some of the pointers Alhani offers—students of the art of singing—study not merely the notes, but the intention and meaning.
Think not merely the notes, but the
intention and meaning.
Study not merely the notes, but the
intention and meaning.
Study not merely the notes, but the
intention and meaning.
Study not merely the notes, but the
intention and meaning.

Only the strong should become singers or actors. The wear and tear of travel plays have with weak constitutions.
Breath properly. Never sing for more than twenty minutes at a time.
If the student's method be good, nothing will injure his voice. Learn the right way to sing and Wagner can do you no harm.
Progress is slow. Not even from month to month can you gain progress. After four or six months you may perhaps look back.
A singer should be grounded by a good teacher. There are many incompetent teachers in Italy.
The would-be singer should have enough money to support him or herself during the period of study.
No reputation is so high that it cannot rise higher. Self-complacency is fatal.

FAIRBANKS DUST NOW
SHIPPED IN CANS

Recent thefts of Gold While in Transit on the Yukon Responsible for changed Method of Transportation.

Fairbanks, Alaska, October 24.—Gold dust for the exterior now is being sent out in four-pound cans. This new system was adopted after the series of big precious metal thefts from the sacks of registered mail while they were being transported from Fairbanks to Dawson. Three times the mail bags were robbed, and all told more than $75,000 in gold-dust was taken.

Under the present system, the gold is carefully weighed after it comes from the assayer and put in separate gold boxes. The mailing clerk of the bank then takes the gold, weighs out enough so that the entire package, gold dust, tin box, sack tags and all weighs exactly four pounds. He seals the box and package and puts on the package $1.50 in postage. The package is then turned over to the registry clerk and a separate registry receipt is made out for each package.
These packages are put into a sack and a rotary lock is placed on the bag.

The bill on the inside shows the number of the lock, and this rotary lock is not opened until it reaches its destination. When it is opened, the number contained inside the bag and the one on the lock will show if the bag lock has been tampered with.
Insurance companies, which lost heavily when the three gold robberies took place on the Yukon, are responsible for the inauguration of the new system.

SECOND DAY OF TEACHERS' ASSOCIATION CONVENTION

was to teach the child how to acquire knowledge. When the child has mastered the system of thinking, he can get at anything he wants, and was not dependent on after life upon technical teaching in school.

Dignity of Labor.
Mr. McQuinn asked what answer was to be given to the advocates of manual training and domestic science in saying that the introduction of these into the schools gave youth a strange sense of the dignity of labor, that the schools of today were too strong upon intellectual training and too weak on the industrial side.

Mr. Campbell, in reply, suggested that each teacher provide himself with a copy of Factor Reagents, and that there were in that book two pages by Carlyle upon labor that would make any child respect labor.

The remark was greeted with applause. Inspector Thibault was of the opinion the curriculum was now fairly broad, and in country schools particularly the pupils should first be taught English and arithmetic, and then to write a good letter. As regards nature study, the pupils in short-term country have more of the things and coyotes and animal life than the teachers had. To even say matters the teachers should energetically impart to them a knowledge of composition. A knowledge of English and a taste for literature were the main things required in country schools, however, it might be advisable to introduce domestic science and manual training.

Inspector Louche agreed with the general argument advanced by the chairman that children should be trained to do as well as to absorb. But not necessarily how to do in using wood or making pump handles. That could acquire the child in the ordinary branches of education.

Inspector Ross said that domestic science and manual training should be put on the curriculum, not standard V. is reached. Before that, but not necessarily how to do in using wood or making pump handles. That could acquire the child in the ordinary branches of education.

Inspector Ross said that domestic science and manual training should be put on the curriculum, not standard V. is reached. Before that, but not necessarily how to do in using wood or making pump handles. That could acquire the child in the ordinary branches of education.

Thursday Afternoon.
Yesterday afternoon's session of the Northern Alberta Teachers' convention was one of live interest, opening with an address upon the "Course of Physical Education for Schools," by C. K. Flint, physical instructor in the public schools of this city. This was most effectively illustrated by a drill of children selected from the various public schools of the city.

Mr. Flint's arguments as to physical and mental benefits to be derived from this feature of school work could not have been more forcibly exemplified than by the well trained drill of the primary and high classes. The boys were in line, wearing tracks, the boys uniformly wearing navy white blouses. The primary girls were in line, wearing tracks, the girls uniformly wearing navy white blouses. The primary girls were in line, wearing tracks, the girls uniformly wearing navy white blouses.

At the conclusion of the afternoon's program an interesting discussion was stimulated by the chairman upon the statement taken by R. S. Jenkins, M.A., his paper on Domestic Science as a Public School Study. Mr. Jenkins had advocated that elementary education should rest rather on the ideal than the utilitarian standpoint, and that domestic science would most aptly find its place in technical or high schools.

Considerable amusement and frank approval greeted Inspector Ellis' statement in the following dialogue:
Inspector Ellis—"I am of opinion schools would spend on hour a day under the direction of their mothers, instead of pushing about the streets, they would learn more there in one month than at the public school in one year." (Applause.)

"The mother might not always be at home," said the chairman, thinking of the city woman's busy afternoons. And "bridge-five o'clock" whispered some in an undertone.

Inspector Ellis—"Well, if a mother is not at home when she is needed to look after her child's interests, it is not the difference what relationship that child gets outside her home." (Renewed applause.)

Paper on Fractions.
An able paper illustrating a "First Lesson in Multiplication and Division of Fractions" was read by R. H. Johnson. It contained many helpful suggestions for the teachers who were confronted with the trying facts of the child-mind which according to the old rhyme exclaimed, "But fractions set me mad." The paper was brief and to the point and much appreciated.

Address on Domestic Science.
The main address of the afternoon and that which provoked discussion was that upon "How Far can Domestic Science be made a School Subject?" "To decide," said the speaker, "whether or not a subject shall be put on the school program we must have some basis for our choice. We must get back to the question of why the state undertakes education at all. Then we must consider the capacity of the pupil for the subject, as determined by his age and the number of his other studies. Next we must consider the utility of the subject for the pupil in after life in other ways such as for money making, making life easy, etc."

ings. Why does the state undertake education? A system of education is very often borrowed without consideration of circumstances; a piece taken here, a piece taken there. In Eastern Canada inspectors and principals go to the States or to Europe to pick up something which they take back and add it to the educational work at home without consideration of whether what is suitable in one place may not be very unsuitable to another. A good educational system is a living organism and its parts may not readily fit in elsewhere.

"The state must see that each citizen is able to give his voice intelligently in its government. He must be able to read and write in order to be able to do this. He must be able to think clearly, readily grasp meanings and draw conclusions. The study of arithmetic and literature help him to do this. He must know the political institutions of his country and have some conception of how they came into being. Hence the necessity of history."

The Evening Session.
The evening session on Thursday took the form of an entertainment, and numbered among the audience of 300 were many residents of the city. The entertainment feature of the convention was not new. It was inaugurated at a previous convention, held at the platform of the President McCall, Vice-President J. A. File, Mayor Griesbach, Deputy Minister of Education McKenzie, Rev. Dr. McQueen, Inspector Ellis, Louche and Thibault, Principal New, Edmonton, and Principal Jenkins, Strathcona. In taking his Principal Ross' chair, which was suddenly under him. He was not injured, but the accident caused some considerable amusement. He apologized for the accident.

President McCall, who assumed the chair in the unavoidable absence of Hon. Dr. Hatherford, tendered to the Minister of Education of Alberta, expressed his confidence in the large audience, including many delegates from the provinces, and their sympathy with the association's work. He called upon his worship, Mayor Griesbach.

The Mayor's Address.
The Mayor referred to Principal Ross' address and humorously stated he was pleased that gentleman had been in the city. He extended the official freedom of the city to the delegates. He observed, in concluding his address, that there was a lack of permanency to the teaching profession. This was in a measure due to the disposition on the part of the lady teachers to marry, and in the case of the men to go into something better.

The assembly of the mayor's, of the word better, leaving as he did the meaning he intended, gave the audience an opportunity to shoulder the speaker with the tremendous statement that the male teachers went in to something better than matrimony. It took a minute before the mirth, thus provoked subsided.

This lack of permanency, the mayor proceeded, was a fact which must be fought. To fight it effectively in the case of the male teachers would be making the profession more romantic, and the monthly returns must be made up and we're anxious to make this a record month, with this object in view we made extra forceful reductions in many lines of new and available merchandise—goods that you need NOW, or must sooner or later. Then there is another strong reason why you should pay here on Saturday. We will give you a big discount on every kind of goods you buy here tomorrow.

The paper was brief and to the point and much appreciated.

Address on Domestic Science.
The main address of the afternoon and that which provoked discussion was that upon "How Far can Domestic Science be made a School Subject?" "To decide," said the speaker, "whether or not a subject shall be put on the school program we must have some basis for our choice. We must get back to the question of why the state undertakes education at all. Then we must consider the capacity of the pupil for the subject, as determined by his age and the number of his other studies. Next we must consider the utility of the subject for the pupil in after life in other ways such as for money making, making life easy, etc."
